Asking for an ineffective self-examination that the above system is is by design. It's a good introduction to how you see a single tarot card and the feeling you get from it. But we know that Tarot is deeper than that. If we focus instead on whether the question is positive or negative, sometimes we can get another Result from a YES or NO TAROT answer. Tarot is shaded and often there are many shades of grey in a response and on a single tarot card, as you can see in how to read a daily tarot card. If we ask the fool a positive question: will he stay with me? Do I have the job? Is this new person good for me? The answer is clearly a resounding yes for everyone. But what happens if the question is negative in nature, and indeed, what happens if we ask the same question, but from a negative angle? Will he leave me? Will he lose his job? Is this new person in my life bad? If we employ the simple system above, the yes no answer to negative questions is still a resounding yes. If we draw the 3 swords for those questions, we see an interesting change in how the questions are answered by the Tarot.for Example, the Positive Questions When drawing the 3 Swords: Will you stay with me? Will you take the job? Is this new person this new person in my life good for me? They're all clearly a No. But what are the negative questions? Will you leave me? Will you lose my job? Is this new person a new person in my life bad for me? I'm clearly a yes. The answers were flipped when we approached the subject from different angles, but no matter how those questions were asked, positively or negatively, the 3 of Swords is giving us the same answer - the news is not good. To get the most accurate yes no response from Tarot, you need to ask an effective and specific question and include a time period. #tarot Click for TweetOu you can see how complicated and contradictory this can be, but we can use tarot cards for everyone and bring some visual and interpretive guides to help us. Will you be with me? Or, will you leave me? Which one do we choose? My choice would be hopeful and my desired result. I don't want to focus on the negative. I do not ignore it, it is part of life but you know the saying: a negative mind will never produce a positive life. If I really want her to be with me, I'd focus on that. Attraction of these questions, but this time, even determining the answer yes or no, look at the character of the paper, the environment, the directional dignities if a person is depicted and the overall meaning of the paper. Positive questions answered by the fool: will you stay with me? Yes! And it will bring joy, happiness and spontaneity to yours Do I get the job? Yes! And you will love your new role. This new person in my good life for me? Yes! You'll feel like a new person when they're around you. Negative questions answered by the fool: I'll leaveYes, yes It is better for both as you feel the freshness of freedom. Will I lose my job? Yes, yes, but it is a blessing under lying spittle as something new is on the horizon. Is this new person in my life an evil for me? So here we have a problem. It could be a yes or no, even a maybe. We could say that this person is a wonderful addition to your life that brings joy and happiness. Or we could say that they practically ignore them and do their own thing most of the time. Let them wonder if you even exist. The positive questions answered with the 3 of the swords: Will he stay with me? No, it's gonna break your heart. Do I get the job? No, and you'll get angry. Is this new person in my life okay with me? No, they're gonna cause you pain and pain. Negative questions answered with 3 of Spade: Will he leave me? Yeah, and it's gonna break your heart. I'll lose my job? Yeah, and you're gonna get angry. Is this new person in my life not good for me? So, with a few guidelines, we can guess and interpret a single tarot card that not only gives us a yes or no answer, but it also fills us a little gray. This gives us a clarity that we would not get with a simple yes or no and also gives us some orientation. Reinsurance is optional, depending on your response and situation. The take-away from this section is however clear "define and perfect your question before making the tarot. Also, be aware that you might not get a definitive answer to a very important question, as the Crazy showed us. Go back to the top of the pageIncorporating the times in your yes No Tarot Questions Sometimes it seems that tarots have a terrific sense of humor. Ask your question, the tarots answer and ask you, what the hell happened? You probably weren't specific enough. Think of the genius in the lamp and there comes the idea. Ask if you're going to see yourself again when you really mean, if we're romantically involved in the future, it's probably a yes because you'll probably see that person again, but not the way you've hoped. I have seen it many times, so be absolutely clear about what you want to know and leave nothing open to interpretation. Be specific. If you want to know if the man you like at work will call you, then call it in your question (names are fine, but the full name is better). You want me to call you just for a chat or a date? When do you want to know when it happens? Add a period of time, because it might call you in five years because it became your boss, then the tarots will respond yes and when it won't call by the end of the month, you think the tarots were wrong. So a great question in relation to the above would be: Johnny Depp will call me to set up a romantic date by the end of April? Wouldn't that be nice?! Seriously though, you can see the difference betweenfirst thoughts to an effective question that will give you a definitive answer.How to turn two questions into OneOften I I He asked, I want to know if I'll see him again and if we go back together. It's two questions, but we can depress them. Find out if you're coming back together, it'll be more important to find out if you see him again. I hope that's obvious. And again, we should add a time frame to get an idea of when: Will I come back with Johnny Depp by the end of the year? Go back to the top page Yes No Tarot questions to avoidDhould, actions and permits to actIt should also include actions and permits to act. Should I meet Tim in town? Should I challenge my parents and go to the festival? Should I buy the house? Imagine the scenario: ask a question, which is actually just a permission to act, and through the tarots you are given the free way. Yay! It's okay. But then you realized it wasn't what you wanted, after all, and now you've been busy with this. In this scenario, you didn't think well about your choices, since you asked for permission, you could also look for the guilt for your new situation and you could look at me and the tarots for the situation you are now in. I know, it seems a little hard, but it's important to be honest here. The illusions confuse and the purpose of a reading of tarots is to obtain clarity. So you stay objective, think about your choices and if you really want to do something, do you really need permission from an external source? Of course not.Go back to the top of the pageHow to Get a Yes or No Response with the inverted TarotsYou may have noticed that the Yes pile is significantly larger than the No pile and perhaps combined. This might seem unbalanced to you, I like to think that in the world there are more good things than bad things, but there is something you can do to rebalance the balance if you feel comfortable. You can use inverted tarots to help you decide yes no. If you normally use the overthrown tarots in your readings, then use them in your questions "yes without tarots" makes sense. All you have to do is decide on your own whether the card is inverted in front of you is positive or negative, or, as above, use the meaning of cards to help your interpretation of the tarot response to your question. The Sun "a definitive yes when it is in a vertical position. Is it a no when reversed or indicates a delay? Any inverted card for me would have negative connotations and my feeling is that a card I already see as negative will not become positive because it is inverted. But that's how I make tarots. You might have different visions and it's fantastic! Pass through your tarot deck and put the cards in piles yes and those no. You will also have a maybe/not sure pile. You can decide later if you want. Take your stack of yes and turn it upside down and now pass through them, are any of them now negative for you? If they are, now you have a little more without cards. Similarly, if you take no stack andare any of those cards now positive to award on the sun and the 9 cups is sure that most other readers of the tarots would agree that the sun is a yes undeniable card, as is the 9 of the cups, as the traditional card of desire, if you are asking for the desire of your heart and get one of these cards, you can be sure that your desire will be granted. But what happens if one of these tarot cards is inverted? Are your dreams destroyed? Will it happen at all? a way to interpret these cards if they are reversed is to say that initially your desire will be granted and your dream will come true, but initially initially. After a while, you will see a change and you will seem that everything has failed, you can also play these inverted cards as: it will happen, but not yet - you have to wait. back to top of pagesummary to answer yes no question or tarotinitially everything you have to do is make the association in your mind with each card, has negative or positive connotations to you, when you are ready to go deeper with yes, no question of tarots, apply positive or negative demand technique and tighten that question until you include a period of time, this is your experience of tarots and must have meaning for you to work, if you commit yourself with your method and card choices, tarot will respond and work with you.
